who was acting as doorkeeper, for refusing to allow a young man to re-enter the hall because he had no ticket. The Lieutenant told Mr. Jones that the applicant in question had been in the room and should be allowed to re-enter. Mr. Jones resisted his authority, notwithstanding he (the Lieutenant) was his superior officer and master of cere-monies at the ball; that the Lieutenant seeing he was under the influence raised and descending toward his head; that the stick had been caught by two by standers, one of whom said "Don't hat the Lieutenant." He averred he was struck, however, with the end of hibited the wound made by the blow. About twenty witnesses were examined, most of whom substantiated the Cassard be brought around from

Officer Jones subsequently made his statement in which he made no attempt to controvert the charge that he bad been guilty of convivial excess. He described how several persons had left the ball room and said on their return all had produced tickets save the young man with whom he had had the dispute, and he had refused to allow him to enter. He acknowledged he was excited when the Lieutenant approached him, and doubtless said something, but be had no intention of offending the Lieutenant, and was sincerely sorry for all that had happened.

Then followed a long and tedious examination of witnesses in regard to the assault of which Officer Ticer was Lieutenant Smith again recounted his difficulty with Officer Ticer.

One or two of the witnesses saw the stick about to descend on the Lieutenant's head; others saw it uplifted; some held by the officer as about to strike; one hauging on Mr. Ticer's arm; another clinched near the handle commissioners of sale appointed in the (Mr. Ticer himself testified that he had hold of the middle of the stick). Caton and G. spectator averred that he caught the stick and thereby averted the blow from the Lieutenant's head, exclaiming to Mr. Ticer, "Don't you hit the Lieuant," when Mr. Ticer replied, "What have you got to do with it?" This witness thought that Mr. Ticer was hitting at Lieutenant Smith.

Other witnesses saw the club in all sorts of positions, but were not positive in whose hands it was.

Capt. Webster, who was in the ball room at the time of the difficulty, testified that he ordered Mr. Ticer to go home after the trouble and report at the station house next morning, but that later that officer went to the sta-tion house and asked to be locked up with Mr. Jones; that the latter was un der the influence of liquor, and that the former had probably been drinking, though he did not show it as much as Mr. Jones.

A question having been propounded whether or not the two men were on police duty at the time of the trouble, was answered by Mayor Strauss, who stated that a policeman was always on duty as a preserver of the peace.

Mr. Ticer in his statement testified that he had left the ball room for his home, but had returned in order to transact some business with Officer Ferguson; that he witnessed the dispute between Lieutenant Smith and Officer Jones and had seen the origin of it; saw the Lieutenant collar Mr. Jones and take the tickets from him; the accused had rushed in, exclaiming, "Hold up, Lieutenant; you are too fast—you are too fast!" The accused said he always caught hold of the cen-tre of his club; his stick was serzed by a young man who said; You shall not strike the Lieutenant; the accused again told the Lieutenant he was too fast; great excitement had followed, and his action was merely that of a peacemaker. He denied positively the charge that he struck Lieut.

Facts Worth Knowing. In all diseases of the nasal mucous men

In all diseases of the masal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, sunffs, powders or astringents, because they are irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures.
